Grog (Green Frog) by Charlotte Goebel

This American bullfrog (Lithobates catesbeianus) resides in a calm pond inlet of the Blue Ridge Mountains. Native to eastern North America, American bullfrogs are a globally invasive species, often destroying native amphibian populations. The rapidly multiplying bullfrogs exemplify the challenges of preserving natural habitats in a globalized world.

La Fortuna Waterfall by Vincent Shen

I captured this photograph of the 70-meter-high La Fortuna Waterfall in northwestern Costa Rica after a steep, sloping hike down. The dark, stratovolcanic rocks filter the plunging water above, which serves as the town of La Fortuna's water supply.
